Living in Travis County, Texas

Travis County is situated in the hill country of central Texas. Rolling hills, a chain of lakes 150 miles long, 300 days of sunshine, big-time sports that include the nation's largest public university, a thriving business climate, a dynamic political scene and cosmopolitan living are just some of the elements that make the area one of most desirable communities in America in which to live.

The Austin metropolitan area is the 38th largest region nationally. To-day, the Austin area is known as much for its cultural life and hightech innovations as it is for the senators and schoolteachers who shaped its beginnings. Each spring, the region is awash in arts festivals incorporating music, food, the great outdoors or the great club scene, and all facets of ethnic diversity and the arts.

Newcomers can locate housing options to match nearly every lifestyle and near every employment center in the County. Austin embraces and personifies cultural and ethnic diversity. Residents speak more than 20 languages and neighborhoods echo the cultural richness of its residents where Hispanics, African-Americans, Europeans, Asian/Pacific Islanders and other ethnic groups blend in a truly cosmopolitan community.

Austin's public school system is rated among the best in the state of Texas, with outstanding environments, faculty and curriculums for grades K-12. Higher education opportunities also abound in the area at such notable institutions as the University of Texas, St. Edwards University, and Texas State University. With the high value placed on education by citizens and local industry, it is no surprise that over 35% of the City's population have college degrees.

The Austin area's adult population is highly educated. Eighty-two percent of residents age 25 and older have graduated from high school, 40.4 percent have earned a bachelor's degree and 11 percent have received a graduate degree.

The median household income in Austin in 2005 was $67,300. According to a recent Coldwell Banker survey, the average price for a 2,200 sq. ft. 4-bedroom, 2 1/2 baths single family home in Austin is about $199,000 as compared to Dallas at $223,000; Atlanta at $303,000; Denver at $345,000; San Francisco at $1,227,000 and in Chicago at $386,000.

The Travis County Healthcare District

The Travis County Healthcare
District (District) was created by a Countywide vote in May of 2004.
The voters created a limitedpurpose taxing district responsible for providing, or arranging for the provision of, healthcare services to indigent Travis County residents.
In addition to the tax base, the District received ownership of and responsibility for Brackenridge/Children's Hospital, Austin Women's Hospital, and 15 Community Health Centers (Centers) that are currently operated by the City of Austin ("City") Community Care Services Department (CCSD). The Centers are designated as Federally Qualified Health Centers (FQHCs). The District does not provide any direct healthcare services but rather provides services through contracts with other entities such as the current interlocal agreement with the City of Austin to operate the Centers.

Travis County Healthcare District (Con't)

The District currently has an eleven-member staff comprised of executive, managerial and administrative employees. The City's clinic system has approximately 406 regular full and part-time employees which in addition to executives, managers and administrative employees includes professional healthcare providers (e.g. physicians, nurses, medical assistants, etc.) and specialty positions (patient representatives, accounting clerks, eligibility specialists, etc.). There are also approximately 42 additional staff members designated as temporary or on-call (PRN) temporary employees.

During 2008, it is possible that approximately 25-30 of the CCSD executive, managerial and administrative staff will transition into the District's organizational structure. Beginning March 2009, we expect that the remaining approximately 400 Center employees will transition into a newly created 501(c)(3), Central Texas Community Health Centers (CTCHC).

The Austin/Travis County Community Health Centers

Approximately 29% of Travis County's population lives below 200% of the Federal Poverty Level (FPL)

Visit Travis County Healthcare District on the web at: www.traviscountyhd.org The Austin/Travis County Community Health Centers The Centers serve all of Travis County which, according to the 2004 American Community Survey, is the 62nd ranking county in the nation regarding percent of people living below the poverty level. Approximately 29 percent of the County's population lives at below 200 percent of the Federal Poverty Level (FPL) and an estimated 19 to 20 percent of the County's population is uninsured.

The Centers are the medical home to over 48,000 low income and underserved children and adults in Austin and Travis County, of whom 99 percent are living below 200 percent of the Federal Poverty Level (FPL), 38 percent have no health insurance and 78 percent are Hispanic. Twenty-nine percent are pediatric, 7 percent are geriatric and 32 percent are women aged 15-44. Fifty-two percent of the population is best served in a language other than English, and 31 percent of the population has Medicaid coverage.

The Centers affords patients access to family practitioners, internists, pediatricians, OB/GYNs, psychotherapists, nurse triage, pharmacy, laboratory, and X-ray. Through long-established partnerships with Brackenridge Hospital, ATCCHC ensures that patients also have access to high-quality inpatient and specialty care.

The Center's David Powell Community Health Center, the region's Ryan White grantee, provides primary care to HIV/AIDS patients. The Centers operate three dental clinics and five service delivery sites providing health services for the homeless. Dental services include preventive, restorative, emergency and prosthetics. Through a partnership with Austin Travis County Mental Health Mental Retardation (ATCMHMR), mental health psychotherapy, psychiatric consultation, and referrals to more intensive treatments are integrated with primary care services using the Health Resources and Services Administration's model for Integrated Behavioral Health. Other program elements include extended hours and medication management. ATCCHC also provides low- and no-cost prescription drugs to patients.

ATCCHC has grown to provide approximately half of the safetynet primary care services rendered each year in Travis County, making it by far the largest provider of safety-net primary care services in the area.

The Position of Human Resources Director

The Human Resources Director (HR Director) will initially be employed by the Travis County Healthcare District but will become the Human Resources Director for and, therefore, an employee of CTCHC upon its creation in early 2009. The initial reporting relationship will be to the District's CEO and then to the new CTCHC's CEO. This is a rare opportunity to design, implement and manage a cutting edge, nontraditional comprehensive Human Resources program to support a progressive, start-up, not-for-profit health care organization. The new HR Director will provide strategic leadership for human resources and organization development functions including consultation on integrating human resources policies and systems with critical business needs, change management and organizational cultural change.

pate with District and current community health center management in establishing a human resources philosophy, strategic direction, goals and objectives for CTCHC and then to develop, implement and administer a comprehensive, integrated human resources program for the CTCHC consistent with the plan.

The resulting new Human Resources program will need to include procedures and systems for recruitment and employment, performance management, employee relations, organizational development and training, benefits enrollment and termination, workers' compensation and safety, leave management and classification and compensation system maintenance.

The initial task for the HR Director will be to partici-
